ANZE KOPITAR: CAPTAIN ANNOUNCES FINAL SEASON

After months of reflecting about his future, Anze Kopitar returned to LA ahead of training camp with a clear mind and open heart about what would lay ahead for him.

On Sept. 18, 2025 at the Toyota Sports Performance Center in El Segundo, Kopitar stood before a packed room, joined by his wife Ines and their children, Jakob and Neza, and made his intentions known. There, he made it official — one more season, announcing that 2025–26 would be his final year in the NHL.

The decision wasn't an easy one. He acknowledged that the choice weighed heavily on him, with his family at the heart of it. He wants to be present for the milestones ahead as his kids grow older, and he feels deeply that they deserve that version of him.

As for why he announced it when he did, Kopitar acknowledged there are many ways a player can handle this kind of moment and some wait until the final days of the regular season. But Kopitar has faced retirement questions ever since he hinted at the possibility after signing his most recent two-year contract and he didn't want those questions overshadowing the season.

Most importantly, he didn't want his personal future to become a distraction, especially in high-pressure moments late in the year. So the Captain did what he always does and faced the truth directly so that he could shoulder the responsibility in the cleanest way possible.

CalHOPE COURAGE AWARD SCHOLARSHIP PROGRAM

Scholarships awarded through June 2026

"Opening up about my own struggles taught me that none of us are truly alone. Talking to someone—whether it's a coach, a teammate, a friend, or a counselor—can be the first step toward healing. That's why I'm proud to support the CalHOPE Courage Award Scholarship Program, which shows young athletes that courage comes from sharing your story and seeking help."

ANZE KOPITAR: KING OF KINGS

The first Slovenian-born player to reach the NHL, Kopitar was selected by the Kings with the 11th overall pick in the 2005 NHL Draft before going on to a stellar 20-year career that saw him reach the pinnacle of the sport and become the King of Kings.

In doing so, he received several accolades and achieved multiple milestones and is set to becoming the all-time leading scorer in LA Kings history, surpassing Marcel Dionne. The future hall of famer also ranks among the leaders in nearly every major regular season category in team history.

One of the most unselfish players in NHL history, his trophy case boasts a pair of Stanley Cup Championship rings, two Frank J. Selke Trophies, three Lady Byng Memorial Trophies and a Mark Messier NHL Leadership Award.

Kopitar's legacy is woven into the very identity of the LA Kings, a lasting symbol of what it truly means to wear that crest. His number is all but guaranteed to be retired and lifted into the rafters at Crypto.com Arena, where it will stand as a permanent reminder of his impact. Revered worldwide, Kopitar will always be celebrated as both a fierce competitor and a model ambassador for the sport—someone who carried himself with unwavering class and embodied what it means to represent Los Angeles throughout his entire career.

HOLLAND: A NEW CHAPTER

As the summer of 2025 unfolded, the LA Kings moved quickly and decisively to fill their vacant GM position with hall-of-famer Ken Holland who stepped into the position with the confidence of a man who had spent a lifetime building successful hockey teams.

Upon his introduction to the city and local media, he didn't need to rehearse his words. His résumé spoke loudly enough: years as a scout, long nights in rinks, and a storied run managing championship-caliber teams.

One of the most respected individuals to ever hold the role, Holland has earned a reputation for patience, precision, and an uncanny ability to spot potential and pedigree to fill the elements that lead to success.

After spending the previous year away from the helm of a team, he felt the same spark he had when he first started—an excitement that came from knowing a team's future rested on decisions both bold and strategic.

Needing an edge to move the organization forward, the Kings recognized that talent and Holland was tasked with implementing the vision and production that had guided him through decades in the sport.

For Holland, this appointment wasn't merely another position. It is the continuation of a lifelong commitment to the sport that shaped him. With decades of wisdom behind him, he approaches this chapter with the same drive that earned his accolades—determined, focused, and ready to absorb a culture he aims to elevate to new heights.

Seasoned by years of leadership, the organization has gained not only a general manager, but a steward of excellence.

One Badge. Unlimited Possibilities.

DOUGHTY: FRANCHISE CORNERSTONE

Drew Doughty has never been just a cornerstone of the Los Angeles Kings—he's been the heartbeat of the franchise for more than a decade. This season, his impact remains steadfast as he continues to carve his name deeper into NHL history. On November 4 against Winnipeg, Doughty notched his 162nd career goal, pushing him past Rob Blake's long-standing mark of 161 to become the highest-scoring defenseman in Kings history. That empty-net goal may have been unglamorous, but it echoed with significance. It represents resilience, consistency, and a career devoted to LA. It was a fitting milestone for a player whose game has always blended skill, swagger, and sheer competitiveness.

But Doughty didn't stop there. With his steady production and playmaking, he also became just the 32nd defenseman in NHL history to reach the 700-point plateau—an accomplishment that speaks not only to his longevity but to his elite consistency. Season after season, he has been the Kings' engine on the blue line, the player trusted to shut down top opponents one shift and spark offense the next.

To the LA Kings, Doughty represents more than numbers. He is the emotional driver, the veteran who sets the standard in the locker room, and the warrior who never shies away from big moments. Younger players look to him for guidance; fans look to him as the embodiment of Kings pride. As his career unfolds, Doughty's achievements serve as a reminder that the franchise's foundation remains rock solid—and that its longtime leader is still writing his legacy, one milestone at a time.

MOM'S TRIP

The LA Kings continued one of their traditions this season, welcoming players' mothers on a road trip through Salt Lake City, Utah and Seattle, Washington. Alternating each season, the organization shifts between hosting fathers and then mothers for a few days of bonding and giving thanks.

Celebrating these Hockey Moms is inspirational and a testament to the strength of these women who supported countless early-morning practices, cross-town tournaments, and the long, winding road to the NHL. For many of the Kings' moms, stepping into their sons' professional world is both emotional and surreal.

Departing from LA, the group joined the team on charter flights throughout the trip and saw firsthand what life on the road looks like. Along the way, the moms received personalized jerseys, jackets and bag tags, and were hosted to special dinners and

When Marcus Smart entered the NBA, he carried more than dreams of basketball success—he carried a mission. After losing his brother and mother to cancer, he knew how isolating hospital stays can be for kids and their families. That mission became the YounGameChanger Foundation, dedicated to bringing joy, connection, and opportunity to those who need it most.

One of its signature programs, the Smart Cart, is a mobile entertainment station with tablets, video games, and charging docks. These carts transform hospital rooms into hubs of fun and connection—helping kids feel like kids again. With support from partners like Aver, Lenovo, Nintendo, and Walmart, more than 30 Smart Carts are now in 16 hospitals across the country.

Marcus also surprises fellow athletes with carts donated to their local hospitals, including Ricky Rubio, Jaylen Brown, Ja Morant, and Josh Allen—most recently honoring Allen's work at Oishei Children's Hospital in Buffalo. "It doesn't matter if he plays football and I play basketball," Marcus says. "We're all in this together."

Beyond hospitals, the Foundation empowers youth through education, sports, and mentorship—donating supplies, hosting clinics, and connecting young people with leaders who inspire them to dream big. Marcus remains hands-on, visiting patients and families whenever he can: "Sometimes just saying hello is all they need to keep going."

The YounGameChanger Foundation continues to grow, helping children and families feel supported, inspired, and connected.

MILESTONE MOMENTS

activities. That included being invited into the dressing room at morning skate as part of a team meeting and on the bench for a special group photo with plenty of proud smiles.

Like their sons, the moms' interactions and festivities were light and energized, sharing laughs and stories, recounting the moments from when their sons were just boys and all the hurdles they overcame and mischief they enjoyed.

For the players, the Moms' Trip is a heartfelt chance to acknowledge the decades of sacrifice and encouragement that shaped their paths. And for the mothers, it's a rare opportunity to truly witness the world their sons now navigate—one built on the foundation they helped create. Year after year, it remains one of the most meaningful events on the Kings' calendar.

THIRD JERSEY UNVEILED

Ahead of the home opener for the 2025-26 season, the Kings wore their traditional home uniforms for warmups as they normally would, but when they returned from the locker room to start the game against the Colorado Avalanche, they were wearing a new third jersey, providing fans with a very pleasant surprise.

The uniquely unveiled new uniform featured a black design with a silver and black crown logo and silver striping on the bottom of the jersey as well as the arms. The new "Crown" jersey also incorporates elements from the team's original 1967 logo, with modern updates like reflective thread and 3D embroidery.

With the Crown becoming the primary focus, it's the first time it is on any jersey since the 2022-23 Reverse Retros and the first time on a third jersey since the 2012-13 season, when the Kings transitioned full-time to what they won the Stanley Cup in over the 2012 and 2014 seasons.

The team, which is wearing the new jersey primarily during Saturday home games, also introduced silver helmets that are worn for various games and compliment white or black jerseys.

It is available for purchase at the Team LA Store and other retailers.

MILANO CORTINA 2026

OLYMPIC REPRESENTATION: DIFFERENT FLAGS, SAME LA KINGS FOUNDATION

When the rosters for the upcoming Milan Olympics were announced, a quiet sense of pride spread through the LA Kings organization. Adrian Kempe (Sweden), Kevin Fiala (Switzerland), Darcy Kuemper (Canada), Drew Doughty (Canada) and Joel Armia (Finland) were all headed to hockey's biggest international stage, carrying not just their national colors, but a piece of Los Angeles with them.

For the Kings, it meant validation. Kempe's relentless drive toward excellence, Fiala's creativity, Kuemper's calm presence in net, Armia's strength along the boards, and Doughty's leadership and swagger on the blue line were no longer just team assets—they were world-class qualities. Years of development, trust, and belief had helped shape players worthy of Olympic ice.

Inside the Kings' locker room, the appreciation and recognition were mixed with motivation for younger players sure to watch closely, seeing proof that wearing the black and silver could be a path to representing their country. Coaches spoke openly about how Olympic experience sharpens habits, raises standards, and brings new perspective when players return.

In Milan, the five Kings would be opponents one night and teammates the next, but their shared foundation would be unmistakable. The Kings crest had taught them resilience, accountability, and how to compete in hard moments—traits that translate anywhere in the world.

For the franchise, their Olympic presence isn't just about medals. It was about identity and pedigree. The LA Kings were shaping players ready to represent the game globally. And when those players returned home, Los Angeles would be stronger for it.

BROADCAST HAPPENINGS

With the retirement of legendary play-by-play announcer Nick Nickson after 44 seasons, the LA Kings focused on their broadcast for the 2025-26 season and built a stable of talent that rivals most teams throughout the league.

Veteran NHL announcer John Kelly joined the telecast as the lead play-by-play voice working primarily alongside longtime analyst Jim Fox. For select games, former Kings Ray Ferraro, Tony Granato or Jarret Stoll serve as analyst in place of Fox while Josh Schaefer rounds out the rotation filling in for Kelly for certain games.

Patrick O'Neal and Carrlyn Bathe host "LA Kings Live," with Bathe also reporting from rinkside, and Stoll serving as the primary commentator. Former Kings winger Daryl Evans also serves as a pregame, postgame and intermission analyst. Blake Bolden will also join the program as an analyst on select broadcasts with Mike Kelly contributing periodic updates throughout the season from an analytical perspective.

The Kings have a separate radio broadcast, led by Schaefer handling the bulk of the play-by-play, and he is spelled by newcomer Jared Shafran as needed. Anchoring the primary pairing is Evans with all the insight and happenings.
